417 Outside the houses, on the other hand, there are special storage racks (ǒdēdŭ). They consist of four forked sticks about one and a quarter meters high, which are set up in the form of a square and joined together by two crossbeams and many longitudi-
[251] nal beams. On these racks lie supplies of all kinds, manioc roots, unused implements and weapons kept on hand, as well as raw materials of all kinds; hung on them are gourds and baskets full [287] of maize and feathers; the bast aprons of the women are also often hung here to dry (Ill. 24).

[225] For drying the lines used to fish for turtles, special racks made of two long vertical poles joined at the top by a cross-pole are used. The line, hanging far down, is hung on this to dry (Ill. 25).

[824] /200/ Fresh gourds are stuck on sticks to dry; near each house one sees groups of such staked gourds. Later, they are preferably stored by tying a whole number together on a stake (Ill. 26a and b).

354 Other household equipment is lacking. The hearth is outside
184 the house, in contrast to the Šavajé, among whom it is located in the round structures (see "Food" /see pp. 165 ff./); it was only in the modified houses in Schischá at the end of October that cooking was also done in the house. /Ills. 24 and 25 appear here./

364 House and environs are not very clean: food remains such as fish bones, nut shells, and bones, as well as wood, tools, etc., lie about everywhere. While it is dangerous just to come near the [136] villages and houses with bare feet, the vast number of flies and other insects that gather in masses on the refuse is an obstacle to remaining outside the houses.

514 There are no privies. To attend to their needs, the Indians go to a depression in the sandbank, behind the nearest bush, or into the woods. To clean themselves they use three small sticks which they break from [136] a bush and then place parallel over the excrement. The urubus, which live in great numbers near the settlements, quickly take care of cleaning the place. In order to piss the men go to the river. Here they go into
